How much does a new battery cost?

They're unavoidable and always confusing. You buy a new battery and there is automatically an additional fee added anywhere from $10 to close to $75 for a "core". A core charge is a refundable fee that is in place and required by law in most states to encourage the proper disposal of batteries.

Do core fees apply to batteries?

Core fees don't just apply to batteries. If you are a car enthusiast or DIYer who buys a lot of car parts you are all too familiar with cores. Many car parts like water pumps, alternators, brake master cylinders and air conditioning compressors have core fees for the same reason as batteries. To keep them out of landfills.

How much is a refundable deposit for a lead-acid battery?

When you place an order for a lead-acid battery on batteriesplus.com or purchase a battery in one of our stores, a separate refundable deposit, generally between $10 - $75, will be added to the order for a core whenever an automotive battery is purchased.

Will my battery deposit be refunded if I return a new battery?

Core deposits will be refunded to you as long as you return your old battery to the store where you purchased your new battery. Remember to bring back the battery you replaced and not a different, used battery. You may not receive your deposit back if you return a smaller battery than you purchased from the store. Always keep your receipts!
